PROJECT SPOTLIGHT

SAFER, PHYSICALLY-DISTANCED OFFICE SPACES

To create a safer and physically-distanced workplace for returning employees, this Ontario-based manufacturing company utilized multiple Spec™ seating and tables to reinvent their meeting rooms and collaborative areas. The wide range of color and customization options made Spec the standout choice for this project.

Office areas where we gather are seeing numerous updates, with mobile options being of importance. On casters, Manhattan and Urban become easy to reconfigure as needed; Urban can be stacked, and Manhattan nested if specified with a flip-top, maximizing space and allowing companies to scale their workplaces if the need arises.

Even with safety protocols in place, creating productive and inviting spaces still matters. Manhattan is outfitted with power modules, giving users the option of charging devices and plugging-in when seated. A vibrant orange fabric adds warmth and color to the room, complemented with the silver and grey accents on Urban's frame, back, and arms.

Manhattan tables and Urban seating can also be found in the employee cafeteria, but with a much different look that fits the ongoing pandemic. Plexiglass barriers are installed onto Manhattan tables, providing for adequate personal space, while Factory is barrier-free, but spatial considerations are met by placing Urban stools apart.

Color is boldly added to a breakout space by incorporating a geometric printed fabric with bright tones on Tailor Booth, and bright green is chosen for Urban's upholstered backs. The protective screens are used again, but this time with EndZone to allow for safer touchdown meetings.

With the way we work and interact in the office changing rapidly over the last year, a thoughtful design approach that offers a safe, welcoming space for employees and visitors prevails with this design. Classic Spec products, Manhattan, Urban, and EndZone, prove the test of time, while Tailor Booth and Factory gain popularity with their clean lines and timeless appeal, bringing together a design that offers enjoyment for years to come.

FOOD AND BEVERAGE GIANT'S NEW HOME

A well-known food and beverage giant moved into a sparkling new home in Mississauga, Ontario. Their 54,000 square foot office space required furnishings that cohesively work with their new collaborative work environment. One thing that was important to provide is plenty of space to get together - work, take a break or mingle.

Annex Featuring 3 Bases

A majestic Annex tables 120" long in both sitting and standing heights bring an inviting atmosphere to this workplace. With a striking 1.75" solid wood top and a picnic look, the casual design sets the tone for a productive workday.

Tailor Booth can be seen throughout the common areas, creating a comfortable place for coworkers to gather, grab a bite, or work. Staying true to the composition of the room, a neutral look of the Tailor Booth is paired with an all-black Tailor Tables.
